

Facilitator Spotlight

“It’s not about them, it’s about somebody else,” explained Neva Head, Facilitator at Jonesboro High School in Georgia. *Purpose* is the key word. Finding purpose in helping others is something Neva sees as a vital part of her students’ passage into adulthood. “Chick-fil-A Leader Academy sparks a desire in their hearts to help others,” says Neva of her students. “Teenagers want to have purpose — to be needed and to make a difference. We are planting seeds in these students for giving back.” For their Do Good December project, Jonesboro High School partnered with Habitat for Humanity to paint a home in their community— not a small undertaking. For their Impact Project, they are collaborating with the Construction Department at the school to build a network of flowerbeds that they can place and plant at that same home in the spring. “Seeing this through will be so important in helping these students realize the difference they are making,” added Neva.
